

Taiwan Watch

March CBC meeting preview: Still a pause

CBC likely to stay on hold in March

We expect the CBC to keep its policy rate unchanged at 1.875% at its upcoming quarterly meeting on March 21. This is consistent with the latest guidance from the CBC's Governor Yang that there is "no room for rate cuts before June", given CPI inflation is currently still well above the CBC's implicit target of 2%.

Electricity price hikes unlikely to trigger further tightening

Governor Yang's hawkish comments during a meeting with Taiwan's lawmakers today stirred worries that the CBC might look to further hike rates this year. Yang expressed concerns that the government's proposed electricity price hike in April could cause knock-on effects on inflation and raise inflation expectation. The central bank estimates that if TaiPower increases electricity prices by 10%–15%, the direct/indirect impact on headline CPI inflation will be 0.12/0.24ppt. As a result, CPI inflation could exceed 2% in 2024 and the CBC is likely to raise its CPI forecast (vs. 1.89% previously) next week.

Governor Yang stated that Taiwan's interest rate won't stay low as before if there are structural changes to CPI, yet he also pointed out that electricity price hikes are unlikely to cause such changes. When asked about responses to inflation, Governor Yang said the CBC will "cautiously" discuss the possibility of rate hikes at the upcoming meeting.

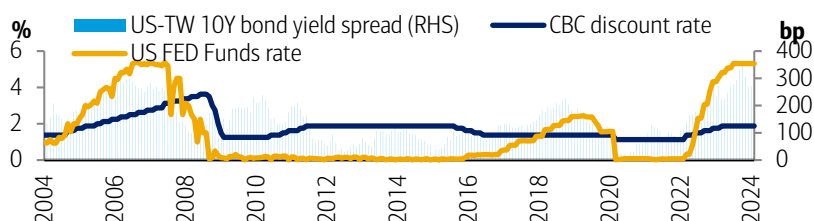

In our view, electricity price hikes could lift the CPI trajectory slightly higher and delay the return to target inflation level by a few months. However, that is unlikely a game changer, as electricity makes up only 1.2% of the CPI basket. In Jan-Feb, headline/core CPI inflation averaged at 2.4%/2.3%, lower than 2.7%/2.4% in Dec and pointing to a continued downtrend. We still expect CPI inflation to fall below 2.0% in mid-2024.

CBC remains confident about 2024 growth outlook

The central bank remains optimistic about the growth outlook in 2024, as Governor Yang stated today that it should be fairly easy to reach the GDP growth forecasted by the CBC (3.12%). The CBC's view on growth is consistent with our projection of a modest growth recovery (+3.2%) this year, on the back of likely better export performance.
