COF/SYF/BFH: January Operating Metrics

Price Objective Change

Credit in-focus in January metrics

Credit card issuers COF, SYF, and BFH reported monthly operating metrics today and we believe COF had the cleanest print among peers. Overall, January data detailed a continued deceleration in loan growth and a pick-up in delinquencies. Positively, net charge-off rates for COF and BFH improved on a m/m basis. That said, credit is likely to get weaker in 1Q and we note SYF's 1Q losses are trending higher than our prior expectations and BFH also has guided for 1H24 losses in the mid-to-high 8% (vs. 8% in Jan). Loan growth at COF and SYF was better than historical seasonality. This could be a source of upside for top-line estimates, but if driven by higher revolve rates because consumers are more financially stressed, it could also be a source of credit concern.

COF: Strong card credit and in-line loans

January net charge-off (NCO) rate fell 7bps m/m to 5.71%, which is better than historical seasonality would predict as January loss rates typically increase 5bps m/m (past 10yr avg). While 1-month data is too early to call a cyclical peak in losses, the Jan credit loss data is encouraging and while we still expect loss rates to increase a bit from current levels, the rate of increase should moderate. Jan DQs increased 17bps m/m, broadly in-line with recent history. We remain comfortable with our 5.80% domestic card NCO forecast for 1Q (vs. consensus at 5.67%). Loan growth was also solid at 11.9% y/y, a slight deceleration from 12.2% in December. The sequential decline of 1.9% was better than the average 2.5% decline observed over the last 10 years and loans are trending in-line with our 1Q forecast.

SYF: NCOs up 40bps m/m

Synchrony (SYF) reported January adj. NCO rate of 6.0%, up 40bps m/m which was weaker than historical seasonality (+20bps m/m). Positively, delinquency rates were again broadly in-line with typical seasonality, suggesting losses should follow and y/y increases in NCOs should moderate soon. That said, the Jan NCO rate was above our expectation, and we think 1Q losses are likely trending above our prior 5.85% forecast, and we adjust our loss forecast to 6.1% for 1Q. Ending loan balances of $101.3B grew 10.7% y/y, decelerating from December at 11.4%. Balances fell 165bps m/m which was less than historical seasonality (5yr average of -394bps). We also note that the Ally portfolio has not been closed yet.

BFH: Losses down 20bps to 8.0%

Losses fell 20bps in January to 8.0% from 8.2% in December and the seasonal decline is better than historical seasonality would suggest (7yr average of +3bps). While January losses were solid, we note BFH guidance and delinquency trajectory suggest 1H24 losses are likely in the mid-to-high 8% range. BofAe/cons expect this as 1Q estimates are 8.50%/8.55%, respectively. Loan balances declined 9.8% y/y vs -9.5% in December, due to harder comps from the loss of the BJ's portfolio.

See inside for estimate changes for COF, SYF, and BFH in addition to BFH PO change to $40 from $35 previously.

COF: NCO rates improve sequentially

Card loss rates at 5.71%, down 7bps m/m

The January domestic card NCO rate was 5.71%, which was down 7bps m/m from December. The sequential move was better than historical seasonality which shows an average 5bps increase m/m in January (10yr average). Loss rates generally tick higher in 1Q, so we are comfortable with our 1Q Domestic card NCO forecast of 5.8% (vs. consensus at 5.67%). Notably, the 30+ day delinquency rate increased 17bps m/m to 4.78%, in-line with recent history at +15bps m/m.

Auto loss rates also increased to 2.36% from 2.18% in December. The delinquency rate in Auto was 6.29% (6.34% in December). Auto NCOs were up 18bps m/m and DQs down 4bps m/m, both underperformed historical seasonality with 10-yr average m/m changes in January averaging +1bps for NCOs and -17bps for DQs. Overall, we would view Auto credit results as a negative in January, though note that Auto losses tend to decline more sharply in Feb/March.

Loan growth up 11.9% y/y

Domestic credit card balances of $144.9B increased 11.9% y/y which is a slight deceleration from December at 12.2% y/y. The sequential 186bps decline in loan balances outperformed historical seasonality which has averaged a 253bps decline in balances over the last 10 years. Loan balances are generally trending in-line with expectations. Auto balances also fell 36bps m/m to $73.8B, likely reflecting Capital One's continued prudence in the market.

Tweaking estimates

We tweak our 1Q/2024 estimates to $3.99/$13.89 from $4.12/$13.90 previously as we account for more front-weighted reserving as peak losses come into view. We maintain a $146 PO based on an unchanged 10.5x multiple to our 2024 EPS forecast. Buy.

SYF: Losses up 40bps m/m

Card losses increase to 6.0% in January

The January net charge-off rate was 6.0%, which was up 40bps from December at 5.6%. The increase in December charge-off rate was primarily due to +20bps recovery adjustment in January (vs. -0.10% adj. in December) and an additional charge-off cycle in December. That said, we do look at SYF losses adjusted for recovery timing and January at +40bps m/m, meaningfully underperformed historical seasonality of +20bps in January. Historically, losses typically increase further in February and then decline slightly in March, and our loss forecast at 5.85% appears low. The 30+ DQ rate increased 20bps m/m to 4.9%, largely in-line with historical seasonality, which we view as a positive. DQs have been performing broadly in-line with historical seasonality for the past quarter, suggesting the changes in loss rates (NCO rate) should also begin to reflect typical seasonality and y/y increases will moderate shortly (Exhibit 2).

January loan balances grow 10.7%

Ending loan balances of $101.3B increased 10.7% y/y, decelerating from December at 11.4% y/y. Balances declined 165bps m/m which was much more resilient than typical January seasonality which has averaged a 394bps decline m/m in the last five years. While balances typically decline in February and March, we believe BofAe/cons estimates are reasonably well calibrated at $101.1B/101.0B given the addition of the Ally point of sale portfolio which should close in 1Q24.

Adjusting estimates

We adjust our 2024/2025 EPS estimates to $5.59/$6.42 from $7.35/$6.37 prior as we account for weaker 1H24 credit and adjust out the Pet's Best sale. We maintain a Neutral rating and $41 PO based on an unchanged 6.5x multiple to 2025 EPS.

Exhibit 2: Relative stability in DQs implies credit deterioration should moderate

SYF DQ (shifted 120 days) and NCO rates

Source: BofA Global Research estimates, company reports

BofA GLOBAL RESEARCH

BFH: Loss rates improve, but DQs are up

Loss rates down to 8.0%

The January NCO rate of 8.0% improved 20bps m/m from December at 8.2%. The sequential improvement in loss rates was better than seasonality – over the last seven years NCO rates have increased 3bps on average in January. That said, delinquency rates increased 26bps m/m (+21bps m/m historical avg) to 6.76% which could point to higher credit losses in the near-term (Exhibit 3). The company noted in its 1Q24 investor deck that it expects 1Q24 and 2Q24 losses in the mid-to-high 8% range. BofAe 1Q/2Q NCO forecasts at 8.50%/8.70% are consistent with this and reflect further deterioration. We note that while consensus is in-line in 1Q at 8.55%, it could be a bit low in 2Q at 8.59%.

Loan growth down 9.8% on tough comps

Ending principal loan balances of $17.3B were down 332bps m/m which is a touch weaker than typical seasonality would predict (7yr average at -313bps). The weakness likely reflects Bread's tighter underwriting and commentary that BFH's consumer spending has been slowing. End of period receivables at $18.8B were down 9.8% y/y a slight deceleration from -9.5% in December as the company continues to face tough comps from the loss of the BJs portfolio.

Tweaking estimates and PO

We are lowering our 1Q estimates for loan growth, but maintaining our net charge-off forecast. For loan balances, we now forecast $17.7B ($18.0B prior) slightly above consensus at $17.6B and we expect charge-offs of 8.50% slightly below consensus at 8.55%. We tweak our 1Q/2024 estimate to $3.25/$8.60 from $3.31/$8.74. We increase our PO to $40, which is now based on a 0.9x multiple to current book value (vs. a PE based BV prior). We believe more investors are looking at BFH through a book value lens given potential profitability challenges if the CFPB's late fee rule was to come into effect. A BV <1.0 is appropriate in such a backdrop. If the market gains confidence BFH can return to its historical margin or earnings profile, with lower late fees, we think the stock could re-rate nicely. However, this is likely to take some time, in our view. Maintain Neutral.

Price objective basis & risk

Bread Financial Holdings Inc (BFH)

Our $40 PO is based on a 0.9x multiple to current book value. We believe more investors are looking at BFH through a book value lens given potential profitability challenges if the CFPB's late fee rule was to come into effect. We view a book value of <1.0 as appropriate in such a backdrop.

Downside risks to our price objective are: an economic downturn, which could lead to elevated loan loss rates, increased defaults, higher credit costs and slower loan growth. Deteriorating economic conditions would likely hurt investor sentiment and drive valuations lower. Loss of retail partners also poses a risk to growth and the earnings outlook.

Capital One Financial (COF)

Our $146 PO is based on a 10.5x PE multiple to our 2024 EPS forecast. A 10.5x PE multiple is in the middle of the historical range (7-12x) which we think is appropriate given the more optimistic macro outlook and strong loan growth, partially offset by rising credit costs.

Downside risks are: slower than expected revolving credit growth, faltering economic recovery and rising loan losses, which could drive earnings below our estimates, and result in valuation compression. Cybersecurity and regulations are also risks.

Synchrony Financial (SYF)

Our $41 PO is based on a 6.5x P/E multiple on 2025E EPS. Our multiple is on the low end of the typical trading range for SYF (6-12x), which we think is appropriate given the relatively uncertain macro backdrop and rising credit costs, somewhat balanced by the potential for high capital returns.

Downside risks to our price objective are an economic downturn, which could lead to elevated loan loss rates, increased defaults, higher credit costs and slower loan growth. Deteriorating economic conditions would likely hurt investor sentiment and drive valuations lower. Loss of retail partners also poses a risk to growth and earnings outlook.

Upside risks are: Consumer balance sheets continue to hold strength and credit metrics remain strong. Increased visibility in peak loss rates shifts investor sentiment. Federal reserve achieves a soft landing. Outsized capital return.

This report may contain a short-term trading idea or recommendation, which highlights a specific near-term catalyst or event impacting the issuer or the market that is anticipated to have a short-term price impact on the equity securities of the issuer. Short-term trading ideas and recommendations are different from and do not affect a stock's fundamental equity rating, which reflects both a longer term total return expectation and attractiveness for investment relative to other stocks within its Coverage Cluster. Short-term trading ideas and recommendations may be more or less positive than a stock's fundamental equity rating.

BofA Securities is aware that the implementation of the ideas expressed in this report may depend upon an investor's ability to "short" securities or other financial instruments and that such action may be limited by regulations prohibiting or restricting "shortselling" in many jurisdictions. Investors are urged to seek advice regarding the applicability of such regulations prior to executing any short idea contained in this report.

BofA ESGMeter Methodology:

ESGMeter is a proprietary metric based on quantitative analysis and fundamental analyst inputs that reflects our assessment of a company's Environmental, Social and Governance-related attributes. The ESGMeter is intended to indicate a company's likelihood of experiencing stronger financial stability (higher return on equity and lower earnings and price volatility) over the next three years relative to peer group. There are three ESGMeter levels - Low, Medium, and High - which indicate whether a company has attributes most likely to translate into superior financial stability (in the case of a High level) or weaker financial stability (in the case of a Low level) over the next three years relative to its peer group. A Medium level suggests that a company exhibits ESG characteristics that are likely associated with financial stability results in line with its peer group over the next three years. Full details of our methodology, financial stability definition and disclaimers are available at BofA ESGMeter methodology. ESGMeter is not indicative of a company's future stock price performance and is not an investment recommendation or rating. ESGMeter is independent of the BofA Global Research fundamental equity analyst's investment rating, volatility risk rating, income rating or price objective for that company.
