Not your everyday board seat add; Broadcom CEO to join Meta's board

Maintain Rating: BUY | PO: 510.00 USD | Price: 473.28 USD

Adds Broadcom CEO to Board

On February 14, Meta announced that it has added Broadcom CEO Hock Tan to its board of directors. Meta CEO said, "As we focus on building AGI (Artificial general intelligence), having directors with deep expertise in silicon and energy infrastructure will help us execute our long-term vision." Broadcom is one of the Meta's key partners for both chips and data center designs, and per press reports, Meta had spent $500mn on components and design services from Broadcom in 2023. Our take: As the race to develop leading Gen-AI capabilities intensifies, and given industry-wide AI chips shortage/inflation, we think that having Board expertise from a key chipmaker could be a good fit for Meta's long-term AI goals.

Building in-house custom chips & other AI capabilities

Meta is ramping up its effort to build custom AI hardware infrastructure, developing an in-house chip, MTIA (Meta Training and Inference Accelerator), which is customized for company's deep learning recommendation models. On the recent earnings call, Meta had also announced plans to build: 1) advanced AI products and services for users, creators, and businesses; 2) a new category of personal computing devices that allows frictionlessly interactions with AIs; and 3) general intelligence and open-source products to drive Meta ecosystem adoption. Meta noted that it will continue to purchase chips from partners (Nvidia, Broadcom, and others) but also develop proprietary chips to optimize its workloads and support its AI hardware and software applications.

Meta: Internet mega cap with biggest AI benefit in 2024

Both Google and Amazon will likely benefit from AI, but new AI-related competitive concerns have weighed on the stocks. For Meta, AI/ML integrations are playing a crucial role in boosting ad spend in 2024, aiding in four key areas: 1) engagement growth, 2) creative enhancement, 3) campaign optimization, 4) enhanced ad measurement, and 5) back-end cost savings for advertisers. Smaller social competitors may find it difficult to keep up with Meta's growth engine, while we expect Meta to have new products and services for users, creators, and advertisers. Also, we think that Reels, Messaging, and AI-driven ad improvements are still relatively early and could drive further upside in 2024. We maintain our Buy rating on Meta.

Is there a hardware thesis for Internet stocks?

We would say not at the present time, but Amazon, Google, and Meta are now all developing their own in-house chips and data center infrastructure. While Nvidia technology remains in high demand from cloud and other customers, there could be a point when large-cap Internet company's hardware capabilities are better appreciated for either cost savings (for themselves or Cloud customers) or AI application innovation. Amazon's partnership with Anthropic will utilize Amazon's chips for training and inference, and we expect Meta's and Google's new LLMs to utilize their internal hardware.

Meta has leading AI processing capabilities

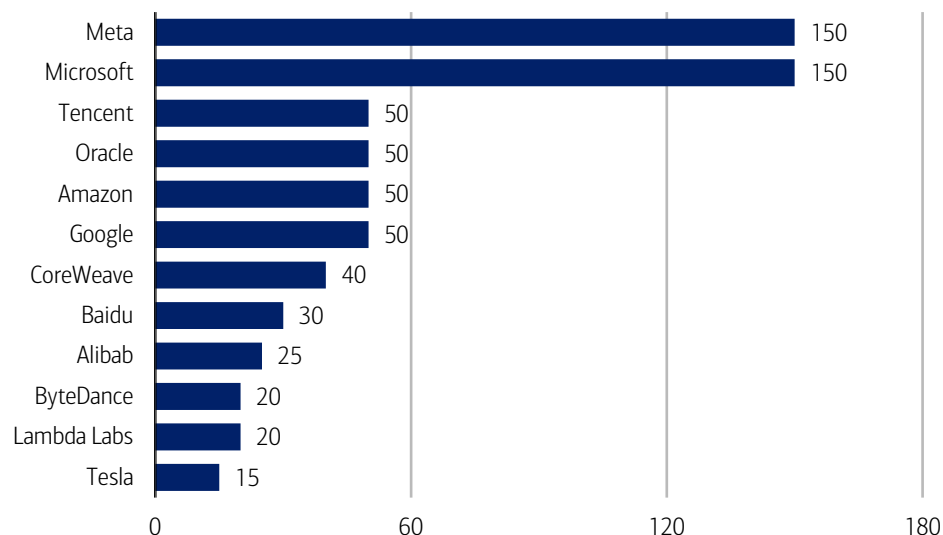

Internal Supercomputer: In May 2023, Meta announced the completion of its internal supercomputer, Research SuperCluster (RSC). RSC is helping Meta build new and better AI models that can work across hundreds of different languages, seamlessly analyze text, images, and video together, and help develop new augmented reality tools. With RSC, Meta is able to train its largest advertising and metaverse-related models to develop advanced AI for computer vision, natural language processing (NLP), and speech recognition. RSC is also helping Meta perform downstream tasks, such as identifying harmful content on the platform.

New LLM: In 2024, Meta also plans to roll out an updated LLM model (Llama 3), which, according to press reports, is expected to be as powerful as OpenAI's GPT 4.0 and several times more powerful than the company's Llama 2.

Leading computing power: Per press reports, Meta's computing infrastructure will include 350K Nvidia's H100 graphics processing unit (GPU) chips by the end of 2024. Per Omdia, in 2023, Meta received ~150K Nvidia H100 GPUs (~$5.25bn assuming an average price of $35K) and expects to receive the rest in 2024.

BofA GLOBAL RESEARCH

Price objective basis & risk

Meta Platforms Inc (META)

Our $510 price objective is based on 21x 2025E GAAP EPS, plus net cash. On a total company basis, including Metaverse investments, our valuation is largely in line with S&P 500 (over the past five years Meta has had a 2pt average premium to S&P). We think accelerating revenue growth and conservative expense management can lead to 3-year EPS growth above the S&P 500.

Downside risks are decline in user activity from competition, privacy or data issues impact revenue generation, potential for Street to assign a negative value to Metaverse (Reality Labs) given significant investments, and new regulations that impact monetization.

BofA ESGMeter Methodology:

ESGMeter is a proprietary metric based on quantitative analysis and fundamental analyst inputs that reflects our assessment of a company's Environmental, Social and Governance-related attributes. The ESGMeter is intended to indicate a company's likelihood of experiencing stronger financial stability (higher return on equity and lower earnings and price volatility) over the next three years relative to peer group. There are three ESGMeter levels - Low, Medium, and High - which indicate whether a company has attributes most likely to translate into superior financial stability (in the case of a High level) or weaker financial stability (in the case of a Low level) over the next three years relative to its peer group. A Medium level suggests that a company exhibits ESG characteristics that are likely associated with financial stability results in line with its peer group over the next three years. Full details of our methodology, financial stability definition and disclaimers are available at BofA ESGMeter methodology. ESGMeter is not indicative of a company's future stock price performance and is not an investment recommendation or rating. ESGMeter is independent of the BofA Global Research fundamental equity analyst's investment rating, volatility risk rating, income rating or price objective for that company.
