Softer-than-expected CPI suggests the hiking cycle is over

October's softer-than-expected CPI print cemented the recent market thinking that the Fed is done hiking benchmark rates. Indeed, both headline and core numbers were below our BofA economists' forecasts, tempering their concern of a reacceleration in inflation following September's hotter report. In light of the new data, our economists have changed their call—they now believe the Fed is finished hiking rates this cycle, and they expect rate cuts will begin in June 2024 (see their 14-November US Watch for details).

Long-duration preferred repricing reached historic levels

Market reaction to the softer inflation data was severe. Indeed, US rates moved sharply lower, and small cap equities (the Russell 2000), which have struggled throughout 2023's elevated rates backdrop, surged 5.4%. On a cross-asset basis, US broad market $25 par preferreds rallied 1.7%, ahead of all US fixed-income asset classes, benefitting from their longer-duration structure (Exhibit 1). In fact, the 1.7% daily gain was among its largest historically, in its 99th percentile since 2012 (Exhibit 2). Within the preferreds space, longer-duration pockets, including REIT preferreds, senior notes, and hybrids, have meaningfully outperformed shorter-duration floating-rate and $1000 par names (Exhibit 3 and Exhibit 4)—a complete reversal from October when duration struggled as interest rates touched 15+ year highs (see our 01-November Preferreds Monthly).

Cycle peaks have been supportive of preferred returns

Though the soft CPI print was the final straw, the market had been coming to the consensus that the Fed was done in advance of the data release. Notably, weekly flows into preferreds retail funds (both mutual funds and ETFs) totaled nearly $270mn, or 0.9% of AUM, during the week ending on 08-November—a near record inflow in its 95th percentile since 2014 (Exhibit 5). We expect further inflows from here as preferreds are typically among the top performing asset classes when rate hiking cycles conclude. Specifically, based on data since 1989, we've found that $25 par preferred securities have logged consistent gains in each the 3, 6, and 12-month periods following each cycle's last hike, averaging 6.2%, 9.6%, and 11.1%, respectively (Exhibit 6).

Higher-for-longer rates advocates a balanced approach

Despite the recent data and subsequent reaction, we still believe that rates will remain higher-for-longer and rates vol will stay elevated. Indeed, economic growth remains firm, and both the labor market and consumers continue to show resilience (see the 15-November US Watch), giving policymakers little reason to cut. What's more, risk-assets are now priced for perfection, and any hot data or hawkish rhetoric may result in sharp moves to rates-sensitive assets. While the recent data and views from our economists give us more confidence in longer-duration preferred structures (including $25 pars), we maintain caution. This in mind, we suggest investors consider a balanced approach that includes both shorter-duration $1000 par and longer-duration $25 par preferreds.

Important Disclosures

FUNDAMENTAL EQUITY OPINION KEY: Opinions include a Volatility Risk Rating, an Investment Rating and an Income Rating. VOLATILITY RISK RATINGS, indicators of potential price fluctuation, are: A - Low, B - Medium and C - High. INVESTMENT RATINGS reflect the analyst's assessment of both a stock's absolute total return potential as well as its attractiveness for investment relative to other stocks within its Coverage Cluster (defined below). Our investment ratings are: 1 - Buy stocks are expected to have a total return of at least 10% and are the most attractive stocks in the coverage cluster; 2 - Neutral stocks are expected to remain flat or increase in value and are less attractive than Buy rated stocks and 3 - Underperform stocks are the least attractive stocks in a coverage cluster. An investment rating of 6 (No Rating) indicates that a stock is no longer trading on the basis of fundamentals. Analysts assign investment ratings considering, among other things, the 0-12 month total return expectation for a stock and the firm's guidelines for ratings dispersions (shown in the table below). The current price objective for a stock should be referenced to better understand the total return expectation at any given time. The price objective reflects the analyst's view of the potential price appreciation (depreciation).

| Investment rating | Total return expectation (within 12-month period of date of initial rating) | Ratings dispersion guidelines for coverage cluster[R1] |
|---|---|---|
| Buy | ≥ 10% | ≤ 70% |
| Neutral | ≥ 0% | ≤ 30% |
| Underperform | N/A | ≥ 20% |

[R1] Ratings dispersions may vary from time to time where BofA Global Research believes it better reflects the investment prospects of stocks in a Coverage Cluster.

INCOME RATINGS, indicators of potential cash dividends, are: 7 - same/higher (dividend considered to be secure), 8 - same/lower (dividend not considered to be secure) and 9 - pays no cash dividend. Coverage Cluster is comprised of stocks covered by a single analyst or two or more analysts sharing a common industry, sector, region or other classification(s). A stock's coverage cluster is included in the most recent BofA Global Research report referencing the stock.
